The following Article has been miſlaid; or it would have been much ſooner inſerted.

MR. URBAN, Dublin, May 10.

YOU have indeed been greatly miſled with regard to the poſt-boy, mentioned in pages 71 and 294, of your very valuable Magazine for the preſent year, but much more by your Correſpondent D, in page 294, than by the Author of the Intelligence conveyed in the former page—This "Thoughtleſs Child, who made up a very plauſible ſtory to excuſe himſelf, and charged two innocent perſons," who, "accidentally, was not ſent with a reprieve for a man condemned at Dundalk aſſizes, or the poor wretch would have been hanged," was certainly guilty of the full crime mentioned in your January Magazine; and of attempting to deliver himſelf from the conſequences of that crime, not only "by a plauſible ſtory," but by actually accuſing two innocent perſons of robbing him of thoſe very mails and expreſſes, which this "thoughtleſs child" had himſelf ſecreted in a variety of places; a charge which, if ſubſtantiated againſt thoſe innocent men, would have brought them to an ignominious death, ſuch offences being as rarely pardoned in Ireland as in Great Britain. But your Correſpondent D ſeems very ill informed concerning the puniſhment of this boy, and, poſſibly, was equally ignorant of the true ſtate of his guilt—This young offender never was committed "to the Gaol of Trim," nor was, nor is, he there confined: neither was he before any Judge or Judges of aſſize in that town; ſo that if any one deſerves the appellation of "Wiſeacre," it is not any of the Magiſtrates upon whom Mr. D. appears ſo extremely ready to beſtow it.——The truth is, the boy, at the inſtance of the poſt-office of this kingdom, was, upon ſufficient examinations, committed to the Gaol of Drogheda; and, at the laſt aſſizes for that town, two Bills of Indictment were accordingly found againſt him: one for ſecreting and concealing the public mail, the other for robbing a private expreſs committed to his charge: upon one of thoſe indictments he was actually tried at the Thoſſel of Drogheda, but eſcaped conviction by the proſecutor's not being able to prove the deputation to the Deputy Poſt-Maſter, who had delivered the mail and expreſs to the boy——upon the other indictment he was not tried; but ſo far from being confined, the preſiding Judge (Mr. Baron Metye) admitted him to bail——from hence, Mr. Urban, yourſelf, and even your Correſpondent D. may "eaſily Judge" whether it was or was not improper to commit this young villain into the cuſtody of the law, in order to anſwer for crimes of ſuch a nature; and whether the Magiſtrate who did ſo commit him, or the officers of the poſt-office who directed the proſecution, deſerve the opprobrious epithet of "Wiſeacres"——it certainly is a ſin too common in Ireland, to take occaſions of reviling Magiſtracy, and oppoſing the execution of the laws; and to the former the very injudicious choice of Magiſtrates may poſſibly furniſh ſome pretext. For this ſin, however, we are in this late Seſſion of Parliament, viſited with a new and moſt oppreſſive police law, moſt burthenſome in an extreme to the public, intended, probably, for a further extenſion in this kingdom; and poſſibly meant for future introduction into England; againſt which I cannot but caution the inhabitants of that country, as a dreadful engine of tyranny in the hands of an arbitrary or vindictive Miniſter, and againſt which thoſe inhabitants ſhould pray with a moſt emphatical "Good Lord deliver us!"—I am concerned to ſee a man of ſuch Humanity, as I conceive your correſpondent D. to be, ſo far miſled as to be induced to caſt reflections upon Magiſtrates without a due inquiry; and ſhall cloſe this affair by aſſuring him, that the judge before-mentioned knows as well "what to do," with any criminal or civil cauſe before him, as any other Judge, who, perhaps, may be a greater favourite with your friend D.

The account in p. 347 of your laſt Magazine, concerning the treatment of the Judges of aſſize, in their courſe to the town of Tralee, is another inſtance of the impoſition of ſome ignorant or ill-diſpoſed perſons upon the public, by means of the very heedleſs conduct of the proprietors of our Dublin news-papers: from one of whoſe publications I am certain you copied that account. The Judges were certainly met by a riotous mob, but ſo far from their being hindered to proceed on their circuit, they actually held the aſſizes at Tralee on the appointed day, and proceeded in peace to finiſh the public buſineſs there to the condemnation of ſeveral priſoners whom they found in the priſon. It is ſhameful to think with what inattention our Dublin Magazines and news-papers are compiled, and inaccurately publiſhed.

In your laſt Magazine, fol. 277, col. 1, line 38, Quere, if Richard Stratford ſhould not be William; ſuch being the Chriſtian name of the gentlemen whoſe life you there mention, and whoſe portraiture you give. In fol. 347, and 4th paragraph, for Philip Curren, read John Philpot Curren; but neither he nor Mr. Smith, attended the Caſtlebar aſſizes. By way of Supplement unto the ſtory of the Drogheda poſt-boy, before-mentioned, let me add another Tale, whereof the mention of Meſſ. Curren and Smith reminds me. The Fitzgerald you ſpoke of (can I forbear ſtyling him the infamous!) in order to prepare for his trial, remitted to Dublin about 800 guineas for his council fees, and ſent them in a deal box, marked "Caſh," by Poſt-office expreſs; this box was thus carried from the county of Mayo, above 120 miles from Dublin, by the intervention of not leſs than eight poſt-boys, was not included in the mail; and was delivered ſafe to the Comptroller of the Dublin office, who can atteſt the truth of the fact. I am, Sir, your very humble ſervant,

To the Editor of the Gentleman's Magazine

Rara Avis——A Trueiſm!

LEAVE, if you pleaſe, Sir,—I'll diſcloſe
The real ſenſe of friends and foes.—
One evening, as I muſing ſat,
On ſometimes this, and ſometimes that,
Is there, methought, ſuch a Companion,
Search Europe through, that will pleaſe any one!—
Pleaſe any one!—ſooner than find
One that will ſuit with every mind
In Europe, Aſia, Afric——hold!——
O what a fool!—need I be told
A truth, which no one can help ſeeing,
A truth, which all the world agree in!
This truth, that SYLVAN URBAN ſtands,
In Britain, in all foreign lands,
In higheſt fame?—and this the boaſt,
That the moſt learn'd approve him moſt!
Who ſtands alone, both ſure and wary,
PRODESSE NOS ET DELECTARE?
No truth ſo clear—none ſo conſeſt,
Sign'd, ſeal'd, by all—probatum eſt.—
SYLV. URBAN, then, is a Companion,
The ableſt, beſt, and will——pleaſe any one.—
Here, my good Sir, a friend preſents
To You and SYLV. due compliments,
Succeſs attend your joint endeavour
To-day, to-morrow, and for ever!
